THURSDAY, MARCH 16, 1899.

The Administration seems to be progressing with its policy in regard to Cuba. All the troops except 15,000 regulars will be withdrawn before May 1st.

JUDGE W. T. LAFFERTY and Hon. Claude M. Deha had a warm campaign for the Democratic nomination for Representative from Harrison county, but at the primary Saturday Lafferty ran away with the prize by 275 majority.

Dewey's officers have raised an interesting question in the matter of the great naval victory at Manila Bay by filing claims for the extreme amount of head money on the grounds of defeating a force naval and land superior to Dewey's fleet.

It is a neck and neck race now between Great Britain and the United States as to which is the most of a billion-dollar country in Governmental expenditures. The former projects an expenditure of $580,000,000 for the ensuing year.

The Democrats will hold the Third District convention at Winchester April 26th to nominate a candidate for Railroad Commissioner. There appears to be no body eager for the nomination, as the district is generally regarded as a Republican.

ITALY—"I'm going to rob you." China—"That is exactly." Italy—"If you don't apologize and fork over I'll pound you and make you pay extra for the trouble."

China—"By coercion of the power I apologize abjectly."

The Democratic State convention is called to meet at Louisville June 21st to nominate State officers. The counties and legislative districts will hold mass conventions June 17th. The Gobel forces carried their points in regard to the convention and united with Stone to elect Ollie James, of Crittenden county, to succeed Gobel as State-at-large Committeeman.

Frequent rumors of the danger of a serious break down in Admiral Dewey's health appear in the newspapers, said to be derived from private persons well informed personally in regard to the matter. If it should occur now it will be due to excessive zeal on his part, as he has permission from the Administration to withdraw from active service for a long rest whenever he pleases.

GREAT BRITAIN proposes to stay in the international game of naval increase to the end. She sees the rise of other nations and goes there several better, remarking, however, that if the international disarmament congress, to meet soon at the request of the Czar of Russia, agrees that the nations shall stop naval increases or modify their programs she will acquiesce to the extent of maintaining her position of relative superiority to any one or two of the nations. It would seem that the disarmament congress has a hopeless task before it.

The leading insurance companies doing business in this State have been indicted at a number of towns on the charge of conspiring together to raise rates of insurance. Said companies have withdrawn their business from the towns where they are being prosecuted. The insurance companies are making a mistake. The extraordinary increase of the cost of insurance over that of former days warrants the people in taking some proper steps to correct the wrong being done them, and the companies need a reformation among themselves and in their methods of doing business instead of willfully resenting just causes of complaint among the people who insure property and trying to coerce them. Indiscriminate hostility to capital and to corporations is destructive to business prosperity and progress, but much of that prevailing has its origin in the just resentment of the people at the same sort of capitalistic and corporate greed as that displayed by the insurance companies in putting up rates.

THERE is some talk of the Administration backing a candidate to beat Reed for the Speakership of the next House. The attempt would be a bold one and would require a lot of very brave hearts to back it. The mere suggestion of it brings to mind the convention of 1892 to elect Reed. Reed has a peer in the next House. His party has none superior to him in either integrity, ability or party usefulness. His so-called despotic methods in a man less able and foresighted would have meant political ruin, but time has amply vindicated him for Reed and shown to the public that instead of harmful despotism his methods were simply far-sighted wisdom. The superficial critics are scoring him now for not recognizing Gen. Wheeler on the last day of the recent session. When sober sense replaces mere sentiment it will be found that Reed acted wisely and established a precedent that all will approve of. Reed has been of incalculable benefit to his party, and what is far better, he has served the nation well despite his partisanship. He prevented the Congressional spendthrifts from appropriating many more millions than they did.

REPORT has it that Gov. Wm. O. Bradley will take a vacation for a few weeks to look out a location to remove to in some large city in the North or West when his term expires. Gov. Bradley's removal from the State would be a loss. As a partisan politician in former years he was not exactly an amiable personality to most of those of the opposite political faith. It is still believed that he practiced considerable demagoguery and made the 1895 campaign largely on false pretences of corruption in previous Democratic administrations. But it is believed that a just judgment will decide promptly that he has made an excellent Governor of the State, one quite the peer of his predecessors. In strictly political matters he has shown a lofty scorn for intrigue and that sort of craft resorted to by politicians in constructing a political machine, which is highly creditable to him as a clean, wholesome, just man, even if it is not regarded as an exhibition of political wisdom by the strictly political class. Then, too, he has displayed a rather unexpected independence in discussing public questions and has expressed opinions at an emphatic variance from those held by the great majority of the leaders and apparently of the masses of his party, which are also to his credit as a brave, free-thinking public man.
